SOCIAL MATTERS. len. Schofield and His Bride-Personal Notes

Gen. and Mrs. Schofield will reside at 1224
Connecticut avenue upon their return from their wedding journey. They are not expected, however, until the early fall. Gen. Schofield has resided for the past two years in this same house, which he leased for a term of years and where Mrs. Andrews, his daughter, presided so gracefully for him. The latter is spending the summer in the west during her husband's absence, who is also traveling with her father. It is expected that the two families will still make their home together, as neither the general nor Mrs. Andrews made any plans to the contrary when they left the city early in June. Gen. Schofield's house is sufficiently commodious for all of them, and in fact the only change there will be is that the young lady who was a guest last winter will be the hostess herself the coming one. Gen. Schofield's enjoyment of his wedding trip was only marred a day or two by illness, but he quickly recovered and now the party are doing the Yeilowstone.

Gen. and Mrs. Watmough are now at Bar Harbor. Gen. and Mrs. Schofield will reside at 1224

Mrs. Marian Mackay still remains in the city. Librarian Spofford's wife and daughter are in the Catakilla. Mrs. Henry W. Spofford is in Mr. Stevens of the Japanese legation will d vide his vacation between Rehoboth Beach and

The marriage at St. John's P. E. Church The marriage at St. John's P. E. Church, West Washington, of Miss Jessie McDermott and Mr. Charles H. Walcott of Boston will interest a large circle of the bride's acquaint-ances. After the ceremony Mr. Walcott will take his bride for a northern wedding journey, after which they will return to their future residence in Concord, Mass.

Miss Amy C. Leavitt has returned from Boston and expects to be at 1327 M street for the remainder of the summer. Miss Bessie Leese is visiting her aunt. Mrs.

Wm. R. Eckloff, in Washington county. One of the most enjoyable events of the season was the full-dress ball at the Green Moun-tain House, up in the Blue Ridge mountains, last Saturday night. A great many prominent last Saturday night. A great many prominent citizens with their families were present. The grand march was led by Mr. Abraham Fisher with Miss L. Kaufman of Washington. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Tobriner and Leon Tobriner, Mrs. A. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Sol Rice and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Losano, Mr. and Mrs. Wood, Mr. Arthur Gasch and sister, Mr. Julius Maedle, Miss Bear, Miss Fannie Reese, Miss Nellie O'Brien, Miss Cora and Ray Kaufman, Messrs. Geo. and Doc. Kaufman, Dr. Shirley, Miss Pauline Baum, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Miss Appley, Mrs. Paesche and Mrs. Winters. Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Etchberger and son are visiting Atlantic City for a month. The Misses Mamie and Julia Harrington and Miss B. O'Brien of Georgetown left this morn-ing for a sojourn in the Blue Ridge. Mrs. A. Falconer and daughter, Mrs. J. H.

Bessling of Massachusetts avenue northwest, have gone to Paxson, Va., for six weeks. They will return to this city about September 10.

Ex-President Cleveland having recently purchased the estate known as "Tudor Haven," lying along Buzzard Bay, with the intention of making it his summer residence, the citizens of Barnstable county, without regard to political opinions, propose to formally welcome and Mrs. Cleveland into the neighborhood and ark. Cleveland into the heighborhood by tendering them a reception, at Sandwick, on Saturday, the 25th instant. Somewhat elaborate preparations for the affair are being made, and as it will be generally participated in by the summer residents in that neighborhood as well as by the leading citizens of the county, it will no doubt be a notably pleasant event.

Among the Washingtonians registered at ily, Mr. C. E. Carter and family, Mr. F. G. Eiker and family, Mrs. Laura Filbert of Baltimore, Col. C. E. Creecy and wife, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Marshall and daughter, Miss Marie Sie ht. H. Marshall and daughter, Miss marie sie-bert, Mrs. A. E. Johnson and granddaughters, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Filbert of Baltimore, Mr. Jas. H. Hilton, J. W. PARNELL AT NEWCASTLE.

His Speech Interrupted by Inquiries After Mr. Parnell's recent meeting at New was very disappointing to the ex-leader in respect of attendance, the hall being only two-thirds filled. No Irishman of local prominence was present and it was necessary to make a Sunderland man chairman. Sunderland man chairman.

Mr. Parnell's speech was repeatedly interrupted by irrelevant inquiries after the health of "Kitty." At points where, in the ordinary course of things, applause would have been in order, mischief makers seldom failed to raise a cheer for Gladstone, and the demonstration made by the disturbers was at least as noisy as made by the disturbers was at least as noisy as that made by the supporters of the speaker. Mr. Parnell indulged in severe abuse of the liberals, but exempted John Morley from the bitter invective which he poured out upon the other Gladstonians. He declared that Mr. Morley told him last autumn that he feared Mr. Gladstone's home rule bill would cause anger and surprise among Irishmen. A denial from Mr. Morley may now be expected.

sing the Possibility of a Call for lar Troops.

Army officers are watching with interest the conflict between the striking miners and the state militia in Tennessee, apprehending that the failure of the latter to cope with the miners may result in a call upon the national govern-ment for troops. In this case it would be difficult for the War Department to meet the demand in time to serve the purpose of protecting the convict miners. The nearest army post, excepting Columbia arsenal, where there is no available force of troops, is Newport barracks, near Cincinnati. There are but two companies of infantry there, however, and not all of these troops could be spared. Fort Russel in Ohio has a bare garrison of one company and the nearest available troops are probably as far west as St. Louis, from which point their transportation to the mountains of east Tennessee would be difficult and slow. The army officers here, however, having a suspicion that the sentiment of the people of Tennessee, including the militia, is favorable to the striking miners, who are fighting against contract labor, hope that if the militia again fails the result may be a return of the convicts to their prisons without a recourse to federal assistance.

Correspondence of The Evening Star.
"CAMP PERRY," NEAR DICKERSON, MD.,

Sunday Afternoon. Horses are snorting and men are laboring at Gott's Mill this afternoon. The usual quiet of the neighborhood has been ruthlessly invaded and a smooth piece of ground near the creek turned into an active, bustling cavalry camp. The second day's march of cavalry troop A of the D. C. N. G. and their allies, the delegation from the New York troop, ended here about 2 o'clock this afternoon. After a short wait for the wagon team to catch up, camp was pitched and formally named Camp Perry, in honor of Lieut. Perry of the ninth regular cavairy, who has proved himself indefatigable in his efforts to make himself useful. So far this rather formidable undertaking of a 200-mile march has midable undertaking of a 200-mile march has proved a success in every way. The tremendous rain which beat down on the moving column for a considerable portion of yesterday had simply the effect of arousing the most expressive vocabulary possessed by the men and putting them on their mettle. Camp was pitched accurately and quickly and the amateur troopers after riding for hours through a driving rain and a sea of mud erected the tents and arranged to camp with the steadiness of vetrans and still had energy enough to accomplish considerable skylarking.

THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE MARCE. As stated in Saturday's STAR the column moved from the armory on New York avenue at 10 a.m. Out K street the long and unusuallooking procession drew crowds to the side-walks in spite of a slight rain which was already showing its temper. The troopers were divided into three platoons, the first under Lieut. Eiker of the local cavalry, the second, composed of the New York troopers, under Licut. Bridgeman and the third under Licut. Ferguson. Behind came the wagon train, three four-horse wagons, loaded down with provis-ions, tents and blankets, the four-horse amions, tents and blankets, the four-horse ambulance wagon, a light wagon and the water cart, driven by a diminutive specimen of humanity supposed to possess the elements of a mascot and dressed in full cavalry regalis. Here, there and everywhere were the hard workers from the commissary department, Capt. Ed Neumeyer of Gen. Ordway's staff, Corp. Springman of the troop and the assistant in general, Ed Appelin. At the head of the marching column rode Capt. Barbour, in command, Capt. Roe of the New York troops and Lieut. Perry of the regular service. Quarcommand, Capt, Roe of the New York troops and Lieut. Perry of the regular service. Quar-termaster Sergeant Rennie, another of the en-ergetic workers, divided his attention between the two ends of the line, while Sergt. Pillsbury had charge of the baggage train.

On out the Conduit road went the horses and wagons the plain blue shirts and fatigue uni-orms of the men and the canvas tops of the wagons, giving a veteran look to the company. Smoothness, however, is usually not of a continu-

The march of the troop excited the widest interest among the inhabitants and the general impression seemed to prevail that another war was imminent and a second smancipation probable. At one cabin in the wildest portion of the route The Star correspondent, feeling the necessity for water within (the heavy clouds were actively attending to the external portion), stopped and asked the group ranged on a descending scale at the cabin door for water. The eldest of the group was a young girl about nineteen and when asked how far it was and which which was the shortest way to get to Washington replied naively: "Well, I ain't never been to Washington, but when pop goes

A CAMP IN THE RAIN. Camp was pitched Saturday night in an inlosure about three miles this side of Potomac, and in spite of the drenching rain Potomac, and in spite of the drenching rain which had poured down, and from which the ponchos had been merely a partial protection, the boys pitched their tents merrily and prepared for supper and rest. The commissary department so far seems equal to any emergency, and the supper was a good one and a welcome one. Fifty-nine troopers and sixteen son-combatants went into camp and fifty-eight troopers and fifteen non-combatants are versual. weatome one. Phys-line troopers and sixteen son-combatants went into camp and fifty-eight troopers and fifteen non-combatants expected to sleep, but fate and one trooper and one non-combatant willed otherwise, at least to a partial degree. The camp was pitched with one line of tents for the men, four tents apart for the officers and the wagons drawn up in line. The horses, after being fed, were turned loose and a guard was set. In the inclosure were about twenty pigs and hogs and the guard proceeded to have fun with the animals. Private John Linney aweke from a bright dream to find a young shoat making free with his person. A brother shoat had been tied securely to Lieut. Ferguson's tent and the squeals emitted by the disgusted animal, put a rout to the general idea that nothing could exceed Ferguson's snores in intensity of sound.

At 5 o'clock the clear notes from three trumpets aroused the camp and the mystery of taking three trumpeters along was explained. It takes three trumpets blown with great vigor to arouse the cavalry camp from sleep.

Today's march has been through a more than pretty ccuntry. The hills roll off on each side, while glimpses of the outlying hills of the Blue Ridge have been a pleasant background for the well-cultivated fields and neat farm houses. The day being Sunday a tremendous number of neatly dressed people have been passed on their way to church and the looks of amazement, as they fully appreciated the invasion, were ludicrous. Along the road the inhabitants turned out on masse. Before leaving camp Lieut.

AT CAMP NEUMETER. CAMP "NEUMEYER," NEAR JEFFERSON, MD.,

Crack went the whips. "Gee up there," yelled the drivers, and with a rush the baggage train of cavalry troop A topped the ridge of Katoctin mountain on their third day's march, and saw stretched out the fertile and beautiful valley of Middletown. Today's march and yesterday's has been rather severe on the baggage train, the route having been over some hills calculated to weary the spirit of an average minded wagon horse. The baggage train, however, through the united efforts of Sergt. Pillsbury, who has been detailed to take charge of the wagons, and Corporal Springman, Commissary Captain Newmeyer's energetic assistant, has been kept pretty well up with the horsemen. On each day a guard has been detailed to keep its eye on the wagons as an aid if any accident should occur, and as a further protection from enraged citizens in search of lost, strayed or—found chickens. The camp tonight if pitched within one mile of Jefferson, a pretty little village with wide streets, big trees and pretty girls. The camp stretches its 21 tents along a picturesque siream with a background of hills and presents a decidedly animated appearance. Men are attending to the wants of the horses, which are tied on one long picket line, the cook fire and stove is in full operation, with a pleasant prospect of supper in the near future, and from the distance comes the quiet hum of a pleasant exchange between the commissary and quartermaster's department.

QUICE WORE IN MAKING CAMP.

Last night's camp at Gott's Mill was only marred by a heavy storm, which passed over during the night. The cavalry boys, however, during the night. The cavalry boys, however, have long since ceased to have the slightest fear of rain and the appearance of the familiar cloud again this evening justafter making camp only brought out a friendly nod of recognition from the boys at work. In making the last two camps the troopers have shown a rather remarkable aptitude for hard, quick work. Yesterday from the time the wagons with the tents arrived on the ground it was only twenty minutes until the tents were up, camp arranged, stable call sounded and the men at work on the horses. Last evening before retreat was sounded Lieut. Perry put the boys through rather a course of sprouts and surprised even some of the veterans. The lieutemant inspected the equipments and losses in regard to missing the veterans. The lieutenant inspected the equipments and losses in regard to missing implements were criticised with vigor. All during the evening country people were coming in for a look at the "soldiers," and the camp at one time was filled with light dresses and "Sunday go-to-meeting" clothes until Lieut. Perry kindly but firmly insisted that camp be cleared of all not having business therein. The visitors then contented themselves with standing on the outskirts and gazing. The camp was also invaded by a number of inhabitants with a yearning desire to sell or trade a horse, in spite of its being the Lord's day. To the credit of the cavalry it may be said that the wishes in this direction were not gratified, but whether this arose from the fact of its being Sunday or on account of the specimens offered has not been disclosed.

Today's march was started promptly, and before 8 o'clock the long line was filing up the road. The route was through a most pleasant country, dotted in all directions by prosperous-looking farms. The camp this evening is only a few miles from Frederick, and has been named "Camp Neumeyer," in honor of Capt. Neumeyer. The New York contingent is doing well. Tomorrow's march will be to Charlestown.

these dispatches and that I neither inspired nor contrived them."

Mr. Halford talked with the correspondent for half an hour in defense of the President's silence upon the relations between himself and Mr. Blaine. He thought it would be eminently improper, foolish and altogether a remarkable performance for either of those men, sustaining the official relations they do, to make any declaration either in affirmation or denial of rumors affecting their amity or enmity.

"The only knowledge," Mr. Halford continued, "that I have of the condition of Mr. Blaine's health is such as I have gained from time to time from the newspapers."

"And you are the man through whose hands goes all the President's mail?"

Mr. Halford hesitated for just a second in apparent embarrassment. Then he said:

"Well, I should not consider it my place to open a letter from Mr. Blaine if one should come. I would not open any letter for President Harrison from a member of his cabinet."

Mr. Halford said he did not aspire to prominence as the official news dispenser of the administration, but simply performed such office as devolved upon him. He offered to ask the President if he was willing to grant an interview upon the subject of his own and Mr. Blaine's relations, but said that it was preposterous to suppose for an instant that President Harrison would do such a thing. It had been the subject of the suppose that he are supposed to the suppose of the subject of his own and Mr. Blaine's relations, but said that it was preposterous to suppose for an instant that President Harrison would do such a thing. It had been the supposed to the suppose the supposed the supposed to suppose the supposed to t terous to suppose for an instant that President Harrison would do such a thing. It had been Gen. Harrison's custom to let newspapers hunt down their own stories, and he did not believe that custom would be deviated from now.

street southeast. The injured man had been out last night and was returning home at the time of the assault. There were two colored men and a woman walking in front of him when he reached the neighborhood of 5th and G streets southeast. Exactly how the trouble started is not known,

It is certain, however, that one of the colore men struck him in the head with a piece of brick, as there is a wound to show for it, and a piece of brick was found on the pavement near where the injured man fell.

Soon after the assault happened a police distress whistle was blown and the injured man was picked up and taken to the home of his brother-in-law, Mr. J. H. Arendes, who lives on G street. Dr. Herbert, who resides in that locality, was called in and he found upon investigation that the injured man's skull was fractured.

Policemen from the fifth precinct, who responded to the distress calls, had a brief conversation with the injured man, in which he was able to tell something of the affair. Sergeant Mulhall and Officer Horton started out to investigate the case, but they were unable to see the patient this morning, as the doctor had given orders for him to see no one.

A HOD CARRIER ARRESTED. In making the investigation the officers learned that a colored hod carrier named Wesley Newman had been seen in that locality made use of the remark: "Three white men tackled me last night, but they didn't have any pudding," and this morning they learned that Newman was working on some new buildings near ith and G streets northeast.

Policemen Horton and Austin went to the building and there they found Newman at work. He appeared as much surprised at being arrested as the officers were that they found him there. From the building he was escorted to the fifth precinct police station, where he was detained on suspicion. Newman denied the charge and told of meeting three men on Virginia avenue last night. One of the three men, he said, was intoxicated, and as he (Newman) passed the intoxicated man made a rush at him as though he intended to inflict a blow, but no blows were passed. but no blows were passed. ANOTHER MAN WANTED.

He further stated that he had heard a man named Greenleaf, who is also a hod carrier, say that he (Greenleaf) had some trouble with a white man last night and he expected to get arrested this morning. Greenleaf was not at the buildings when the officers reached there. The officers learned who the colored girl was and went in search of her, but she was not at her service place this morning. NEWMAN RELEASED.

When Officer Horton reached the station he learned from the description given by the injured man of his assailant that Newman could not possibly be the man, and he was released This afternoon the injured man was resting

This particular cracker was issued, with nine others just like it, to Dr. sued, with nine others just like it, to Dr. Rand just thirty years ago this morning. Dr. Rand was then a private in company K, twelfth New York volunteers. His regiment was stationed at Centreville. Mr. Halford aid:

"In regard to that I can only say that I have not seen any such dispatch in the Omaha Bee or in the Indianapolis Journal, and any statement that I inspired those dispatches or was the author of them is absolutely false."

"Do you by that mean to say that you have never been in any way an agent in the promulgation of any such story?"

"I mean to say," the secretary answered, "just what I have said—that I have not seen these dispatches and that I neither inspired nor contrived them."

"It is as hard and he put them into his haversack, all but one. This was the first hardtack Dr. Rand had ever seen, and he regarded it as something of a curiosity. The one cracker he saved out he wrapped up in a piece of paper and through a New York Times correspondent who was in the field sent it home to his mother. His mother kept it as a curiosity until she died ten years ago, when it again came into Dr. Rand's possession. He has it yet, all in good condition, except a portion of it is gone. This portion was broken off and given to Mr. Ludden, now a well-known merchant of Chicago, who was the first sergeant of the company and issued the hardtack. Mr. Ludden has his piece hermetically sealed up to make sure of its preservation, but Dr. Rand has taken no such pains with his.
